Pick Your Paradise FIND YOUR PERFECT STATE OF ALOHA

A cabana at the adults-only infinity pool at FOUR SEASONS RESORT OAHU AT KO OLINA.

You can't really go wrong when plotting a trip to the jasmine blossom-scented archipelago of Hawaii—the very word elicits a contented exhale. But each of the major islands offers its own unique magic, suited to varied types of travelers. Here, a mini-guide to our favorites, from the Big Island to Kauai. >

THE HONEYMOONERS

The Big Island is known for its varied terrain—from black volcanic rock to lush rainforest—and the Mauna Lani Bay Hotel & Bungalows, set on a white, sandy beach, promises environs that live up to your vision of tropical paradise (and unabashed newlywed bliss). Highlights include a freestanding spa envisioned by Sylvia Sepielli and in-demand local designer Gina Willman, regional cuisine at the CanoeHouse restaurant, and the property's luxurious 2,700-square-foot oceanfront bungalows (with an additional 1,300 square feet of private exterior space), outfitted with private pools, spas and outdoor grills. Rooms from $419; maunalani.com.

The GRAND WAILEA Wailea Canyon Activity Pool includes nine slides.

THE COUNTRY-CLUBBER

Feel right at home renting a custom modern residence in the private club community at Lodge at Kukui'ula, whose abundant amenities include golf and tennis, dining at Umeke Kitchen + Bar, picnicking on the area's lush 10-acre farm, and recreation and relaxation at Hi'ilani Spa + Fitness (the signature Seven-Step Wet Ritual, complete with plunge pool, is a must). Rooms from $750, with a three-night minimum stay required; lodgeatkukuiula.com.

THE JET-SETTER

Featuring a casually elegant design by de Reus Architects and Philpotts Interiors—one of Hawaii's most beloved design firms—Four Seasons Resort Oahu at Ko Olina, a five-star resort that opened in May 2016, is Oahu's most hotly tipped luxury destination in decades. Its defining elements include the four-level Naupaka Spa & Wellness Centre and a Michael Mina-helmed Fish House restaurant. The over-the-top concierge service will also arrange for everything, from a once-in-a-lifetime flight aboard a World War II warbird to a diving trip off a private yacht and a helicopter tour around the island. From $625; fourseasons.com/oahu.

THE FAMILY

The Grand Wailea—a Waldorf Astoria resort and oceanfront mainstay—offers activities for the entire family in a prime, perennially sunny location on the island. Activities abound: from The Rock, the 20,000-square-foot complex that houses the resort's kids club, Camp Grande, to the 25,700-square-foot Wailea Canyon Activity Pool, replete with waterslides, rapids, rope swings, caves, a lazy river and a sand beach. Don't miss the Fishpipe, a 90-second water ride that spins thrill seekers inside a rotating barrel, akin to a mile-long slide. From $495; grandwailea.com.

ISLAND Life

What's better than visiting Hawaii? Living there, of course, at least part-time. As demand for high-end second homes continues to climb—especially on the Big Island—developers are answering with new and expanded luxury residential communities.

Hapuna Beach Prince Hotel, a property on the Kohala Coast's world-class Hapuna Beach, will convert one of its towers from guest rooms to oceanfront condominiums as the Hapuna

Beach Residences at Mauna Kea Resort, inviting 60 families to stay in residences ranging in size from one to four bedrooms, priced from about $1.6 million to $7 million. Pre-sales begin in January 2018. maunakealiving.com.

Kohanaiki, the Big Island's newest high-design luxury residential community, encompasses 450 acres along the Kona Coast, and is set to offer the most unique resort amenities in the islands (read: a 67,000-square-foot clubhouse that features, among other draws, a movie theater and a bowling alley). Development continues; current prices range from about $3 million to $22 million. kohanaiki.com.
