THE HEARTS & MINDS OF SILICON VALLEY

California ... Even Better Than the Real Thing

No need to hop on a plane; there are plenty of extraordinary sights and outdoor action just a drive away here in the Golden State. Check out these experiences reminiscent of popular international summer destinations abroad.

Who needs Capri when we've got Malibu?

Daydreaming of an Aperol Spritz on a patio overlooking the Tyrrhenian Sea? Book a night or two at Malibu Beach Inn, located directly on Carbon Beach (nicknamed "Billionaire's Beach") and featuring extensive ocean views. Guests can take advantage of the direct stairway to the beach and lounge on the hotel's European-inspired chairs to soak in the year-round sun and people watch. Or enjoy a trip to the Malibu Country Mart, featuring unique and upscale boutiques, art galleries, restaurants, and more in a beautiful atmosphere nestled against the majestic mountains.

Sorry Switzerland, we've got the Lost Sierra

While Switzerland is one big natural playground, the Lost Sierra in California also provides scenic landscapes with some of the world's most spectacular recreational areas and mountains. The Nakoma Resort has a 42-room lodge with a Frank Lloyd Wright-designed clubhouse, an 18-hole golf course, and Altitude Recreation Center with weight room, sauna, steam room, climbing wall, lap pools, and theater.

Compare Switzerland's glacial lakes to the 50-plus glacially carved lakes that are decidedly untrammelled in the Lost Sierra region. Other heart-pounding activities include hiking, mountain biking, fly fishing, kayaking, and more.
